

International Human Rights Protection

Master of Laws

Introduction

The International Human Rights Protection programme is aimed for the preparation of law graduates who are interested in the fast developing international human rights standards and their implementation in national practice. Participants of this programme will be able to enhance their legal skills as well as benefit professionally and academically. Graduate students can continue research in doctoral studies.

About the programme

International Human Rights Protection Master's Programme meets the needs of both the Lithuanian and non-Lithuanian students as it examines international human rights standards which are relevant to all countries. It is also useful for national practitioners as international human rights instruments firstly should be correctly applied by national courts and other institutions. This Master's programme is a good combination of all essential International Human Rights Protections aspects, examining main international instruments, institutions and focusing on human rights cases in practice.

Duration: 1,5 year (3 semesters)

Subject	ECTS credits
Human Rights Philosophy	6
Implementation of European Convention on Human Rights	6
Child Rights Protection	6
Refugee Law	6
UN System of Human Rights Protection	6
International Humanitarian Law	6
European Union and Human Rights	6
European Social Charter and Its Implementation	6
National Minority Protection	6
Master Thesis	30
Alternative Subjects
International Human Rights Litigation	6
Property Rights Protection under European Convention on Human Rights	6

