

It was especially valuable that we discussed specialized topics that are not typically covered in the core curriculum.

What also made this short but eventful visit unique was the immersion in Bulgarian culture.

We visited the National Historical Museum in Sofia, the medieval Boyana Church, and enjoyed the streets of Sofia, rich in diverse architecture carrying significant historical value.

It was a wonderful learning experience in Bulgaria. The exchange of ideas and the insights into the legal system of another EU country, so close and yet so distant, definitely deepened our knowledge of corporate governance.

We experienced both rain and sunshine in Sofia, which allowed us to see the city in its different moods.

Yet the mountains surrounding the city and the blooming trees consistently gave it a special charm.

I believe that trips like this are absolutely essential for every young person who is in the process of shaping themselves.

You meet remarkable people and feel an instant connection. You discover a new perspective on the world and see yourself anew.

Education can look like this too: vibrant, active, and social. I am grateful for this great experience, and to the lecturers and colleagues who made it so.
