

Workshop in English:

Integrating transversal competence development into subject-focused teaching

“How can subject teachers help students develop the transversal competences increasingly demanded by society and employers? This interactive workshop introduces the LOUIS competence framework and invites university teachers to explore how general competences can be embedded into existing courses and learning outcomes. Through practical exercises, small-group work, and peer exchange, participants will identify competence areas that align with their own teaching practice and student development goals”

workshop is led by Kees Kouwenaa, a former Secretary General of the Aurora Universities Network and one of the developers of the LOUIS competence framework
